96/3##

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An image processor reduces the load on a user when selecting a frame image from among a group of frame images comprising a dynamic image by executing a specific process for printing and editing. The image processor includes a display controller for displaying a still frame image of a dynamic image with a stop time, and a group of temporally consecutive frame images with the still frame image as the center frame image.